VEER GATHA CHALLENGE

TO REMINISCE THE GALLANTRY AWARD WINNERS

NIRMAL SINGH SEKHON

The Air Traffic Controller on the ground picked up his last words - "I think I've been hit & you come and get them."

History repeats itself... the spot where Indian first ever Param Veer Chakra recipient had fallen while evicting Pakistani infiltrators in 1947, now is seeing the wreckage of S. Nirmaljit Singh Sekhon's Genet.

I am particularly attracted to this brave man as my grandfather also served in the Air Force and I am told by my father that he was a signaller and was part of a team flying the "Pochet" aircraft which was then the only and the longest and most serious aircraft transporting men, artillery, food to war zones like S. Nirmaljit Singh Sekhon. I never met my grandfather, because he is said "This nation will remain the land of the free only so long as it is the home for the countless unknown brave."

INDIA

The Crown of the Brave, Flying Officer Nirmaljit Singh Sekhon was born on 11 July 1945 in the village of Terawal in Ludhiana of Punjab. Son of Sri Jankit Singh Sekhon and Smt. Harbans Kaur, Flying Officer Nirmaljit was fascinated with aircraft and Air Force life since his childhood as his village was located in the vicinity of Air Force base, Halwara near Ludhiana. He was also inspired by the experiences of his father who served in IAF and later entered as (Honorary) Flight Lieutenant.

He was commissioned into the IAF on 4 June 1964 as a fighter pilot. After completing his rigorous training - Flying Officer Nirmaljit joined No. 18 Squadron, known as 'Flying Bulls' in Dec 1968.

During the Indo-Pakistani War of 1971, Flying Officer Nirmaljit Singh Sekhon was a pilot of a Genet detachment (A Squadron, known as 'The Flying Bulls' due to their incredible manoeuvring ability in air) based at Srinagar. In accordance with international agreement dating back to 1948, no air defence aircraft were based at Srinagar until hostilities broke out with Pakistan. Flying Officer Sekhon was, therefore unfamiliar with the terrain and was not accustomed to the bitter cold and biting winds of Kashmir winter. Nevertheless, he and his colleagues fought successive waves of intruding Pakistani aircraft with valour and determination. On 14 December 1971, Srinagar airfield was attacked by six Pakistani Air Force F-84 jets of 24 Sqn from PAF base Peshawar.

Flying Officer Sekhon was on readiness duty at that time. As soon as the first aircraft attacked, he alerted for take-off as No. 2 in a two-ship formation, with Flt Lt Chinnam in lead, just as the first bombs were falling on the runway. He could not abort immediately as the dust from the first Genet was clearing. By the time the runway was fit for take-off, the six enemy aircraft were overhead, and attack on the airfield was in progress. Nevertheless, in spite of the immense danger of attempting to take off during an attack, Flying Officer Sekhon took off immediately and engaged a pair of attacking Sabres.

Such was Sekhon's confidence in his machine and courage in face of danger that he decided to take on four Sabres himself. The speedy fighter expertly manoeuvred his Genet in circles to evade the Sabres while relentlessly firing at them. He fired his single horizontally mounted gun of the PAF Sabres but none were against him.
